

Michelle Wie update: Perhaps she needs a break.

Contributed by Chris Behan
Wednesday, 06 June 2007

The good guys @ The Buried Lead tipped us off to this one.

BALTIMORE SUN has news of even more trouble for Wie. It seems her playing partners at a Monday Pro-Am in Maryland were livid after a round with her - and complained to LPGA Commissioner Carolyn Bivens about her somewhat bizarre behavior.

Rick Maese of the Sun describes the debacle: "On the second-to-last hole, she actually plopped herself onto the grass and sat cross-legged in the middle of the fairway, fingering one of the dolls that dangled from her golf bag.

"For a moment, Wie didn't seem to notice that her back was turned to one of her playing partners, who stood just a few feet away and was addressing his ball. She rose to her feet and the group continued the round.

"Just as puzzling, on two of the last three holes, Wie didn't even attempt a putt, scooping her ball as soon as a playing partner sank his and walking onto the next tee."

Odd to say the least.

Source:

<http://www.sportsbybrooks.com/michelle-wie-sits-in-fairway-plays-with-dolls-during-round-at-lpga-proam-13041.php>